It begins with Shiva and Shakti. As Shiva denotes Purush (Supreme Consciousness) and Shakti means Prakrit (Prakriti). Shiva (right part of the body) and Shakti (left part of the body) are the foundation of this universe which is also depicted as Shivalinga (Shivalinga). Kundalini Shakti is related to Maa Shakti, it is present in all species that have a spine.

It is present as a bright white female serpent on the base (muladhara) chakra. Kundalini is always dormant from birth. When the Kundalini Shakti is awakened, this energy rises up through the spine and affects many mental and physical changes.

This is because during the Kundalini awakening, the chakras are opened and balanced. When a complete Kundalini awakening occurs, all the seven chakras or energy centers of your body are open. Kundalini requires many years of sadhana, both mental and physical Narayanastra is a powerful celestial weapon mentioned in Hindu mythology, primarily in the ancient Indian epic, the Mahabharata. It is regarded as one of the most potent weapons, bestowed upon Lord Vishnu.

Narayanastra is said to possess unparalleled destructive capabilities, capable of causing immense devastation to the enemy forces. When invoked, it unleashes a barrage of thousands of deadly missiles, arrows, and energy projectiles, capable of annihilating entire armies and even celestial beings. The mere presence of Narayanastra on the battlefield instills fear and awe among opponents, as its destructive power is unmatched and unstoppable. However, according to the Mahabharata, Narayanastra can only be used once in a lifetime, and its invocation requires profound knowledge and mastery of celestial warfare. While Narayanastra exemplifies the immense power and potency of divine weaponry in Hindu mythology, it also serves as a reminder of the ethical and moral responsibilities associated with the use of such destructive forces.
